Toulon has become an internet certified city

Publié le 28 February 2014

The city has been awarded four @s for its first participation in the national edition of "Ville internet" (internet city) certification.

Toulon has won the "Ville Internet 2014" (Internet city 2014) certification which rewards the most dynamic cities with regard to digital technology and underlines the quality of online services offered to citizens. The award ranges from 1 to 5 @s and Toulon may boast 4@s, which is the maximum score for a first participation.

An additional award

This certification is the national acknowledgement of the effort made throughout all the municipal territory and constitutes an additional asset for the attractiveness of Toulon City. It adds to the other awards which crown the City's efforts: "Trois Fleurs" (Three Flowers) for green spaces, "Pavillon Bleu" (Blue Flag) for le Mourillon beaches and the "Ville amie des enfants" (Child-friendly city) title recently awarded by UNICEF.

Around fifty partners

For the fifteenth edition of the "Ville Internet" certification, no less than 271 participating cities have engaged in the same exercise: conscientiously answering 170 questions allowing their assessment in the digital technology field. All the themes are tackled: everyday life, online administrative services, culture, education, cultural heritage, social bonds, leisures, solidarity, community life, economic development, etc. A real analysis and synthesis work carried out by the City's Communication Department with about fifty partners within the territory.

The award ceremony took place on February, 19th at Hôtel de Ville de Paris
